2013

Division of Trauma & Injury
Prevention

Why Again?

- ◉ Continuing to work on the development, implementation and oversight of a statewide trauma system
- ◉ Need to meet new stakeholders and reconnect with stakeholders we have met over time

Why Again? (Continued)

◎ Section on Coalition Building and Community Support:

- “One of the most effective ways to educate elected officials and the public is through an organized public information and education effort that may involve a media campaign about the burden of injury in the state and the need for trauma system development. Information and education are important to reduce the incidence of injury in all age groups and to demonstrate the value of an effective trauma system when a serious injury occurs.” P. 25
