Re: Student Instructional Expenditure Report for 2008-09 School Year

Attached is the 2008-09 Student Instructional Expenditure report as required by IC 20-42.5-3-5. As in earlier reports, Student Instructional Expenditures are defined as the sum of two categories: 1-Student academic achievement and 2-Student instructional support. Non-Instructional Expenditures are the remaining two categories: 3-Overhead and operational and 4-Non-operational. The computations herein are based upon financial data submitted by each school corporation.

Key findings from this report:

- The statewide Student Instructional Expenditures ratio (Dollars-to-the-Classroom) in 2008-09 was 57.8%.
- This figure is comparable to prior year figures when prior years are adjusted for changes in methodology noted below.
- This figure continues to trail the US average by 5 percentage points.
- Every percentage point improvement in this figure equates to $110 million of additional dollars to Indiana classrooms, the equivalent of over 2,000 teachers earning $50,000 each. If Indiana schools were to reach the US average figure, this would equate to more than $500 million of additional dollars to Indiana classrooms, equivalent to over 10,000 teachers.
- In addition to reporting each school corporation's individual figure using the same methodology as the 57.8% statewide figure, we have included an additional calculation for each school corporation based on feedback received last year. This calculation excludes non-operational expenses such as the cost of new school construction. Both are accurate but different ways of measuring performance.

Some methodological changes were made this year. These changes are as follows:

- 1) New chart of accounts – As was noted in last year's report, the chart of accounts for school expenditures was revised effective January 1, 2008, making 2008-09 the first school year with an entire twelve months under the updated expenditure codes. This change should be noted before comparing this year's figures to prior results. The measuring instruments used in the past and present are calibrated differently, so it is possible in a particular case that although the reported instructional ratio decreased, the actual instructional percentage may have increased.

Although state law prescribes 2005-06 as the baseline year for assessing performance in improving ratio of student instructional expenditures to all other expenditures, it may be more appropriate to use 2008-09 as the baseline going forward.

- 2) Reclassification of accounts – The change in the chart of accounts suggested that a reassessment of the categorization of expenditures was in order. The categorization of the new account codes was detailed in last year’s report. In addition there are additional expense types classified differently than in the past. At its May 5, 2010 meeting, the state board of education approved the following reclassifications:

The definitions of the four categories were revised as follows:

Student Academic Achievement: Defined as the activity between teachers and students. This category includes those direct expenditures related to instruction, providing instruction, instructional materials, and instructional supervision. Activities dealing directly with the teaching of pupils, including teachers (salaries and related fringe benefits), teacher aides, educational media services, textbooks, and instructional technology are included.

Student Instructional Support: This category includes other expenditures for those services that support student academic achievement within the school building. Pupil support services included in these expenditures are attendance, social work, guidance, health, psychology, speech pathology, audiology, and school administration.

Overhead and Operational: This category includes expenditures for non-instructional operating costs. Areas included are corporation administration, fiscal services (budgeting, payroll, and accounting), operation and maintenance of facilities, security, pupil transportation, food services, purchasing, and administrative technology.

Non-operational: This category includes expenditures that are not related to the day-to-day operation of public elementary and secondary education. Expenditures included in this category are facilities acquisition and construction, purchase of non-instructional equipment, and debt service obligations.

- 3) Operational measure – The ratio of instructional expenditures to total expenditures is a useful measure for monitoring individual school corporations’ progress over time. However, corporation-to-corporation comparisons at a particular point in time may require more analysis and explanations as conditions vary from one corporation to the next. Therefore, in addition to the ratio of student instructional expenditures to all other expenditures as required by statute, we are also reporting an additional measure of just categories 1, 2, and 3, excluding adult education and property expenditures.

The numerator remains essentially the same, but the denominator does not include debt service or other non-operational expenses. Such an “operational” measure allows for more meaningful apples-to-apples comparisons of the operations of one school corporation to another.

Furthermore, this approach enables comparison to national statistics as well. The National Center for Education Statistics (NCES) does not include non-operational expenditures in its analysis of elementary and secondary current expenditures by function. There is one difference in that the NCES classifies school administration as non-instructional, whereas Indiana considers it as instructional support. Thus, school administration (24000) and corporation administration (23000 and 25000) have been delineated separately for those wanting to compare to data from other states.

As always, OMB is ready and willing to assist the Indiana Department of Education and local school districts to drive the percentage of K-12 dollars spent in the classroom higher.
